HUNTING DAY.

Ed Zeiter, residing south of the city and well known by local sportsmen, keeps a pack of hounds and goes out hunting on his farm every day as soon as the corn crib is full and the milking is done.

Rob Elliott was camping down on the Kankakee many years ago with a companion and returned late one afternoon after a long day spent shooting ducks, and found that not only their tent, but clothes, blankets and provisions had been burned up during their absence.

Chris Grimm was out hunting southwest of town once and coming upon a dense growth of underbrush, quail began to rise, one at a time. Chris said he expected a bevy to fly up anytime and decided not to shoot until they did. In the meantime the birds kept on rising singly until probably a hundred had flown, and then they ceased to come any more. Chris stood there and waited for the birds to shoot, but never pulled the trigger.

Harry Tubbs once went out quail hunting with seven other men. They journeyed thither in two automobiles and had only one gun in the party. They drew cuts to see who would get the gun. Arriving at Matt Hines' sheep farm on the Crumstown road, they clambered out of the cars and started through the brush. After they had trudged along in the wake of the gunner half an hour, they spied a quail quietly roosting on the trunk of a fallen tree. The birds were in easy range and didn't seem to be in a hurry to rise, but the gunner was so slow in taking aim they got tired of waiting and made for distant parts. The disgusted hunting party then vented their wrath upon the dilatory gunner and asked him why in blazes he didn't shoot when he had the chance. "Aw," he retorted, "I didn't want to kill the poor things."

Ike Staples once went out for to hunt with six other men, a dog and a ferret, and all except the dog and the ferret had guns. They tramped all over St. Joe county without picking up a track and were about to consider Laporte county when the dog finally treed—or we should say, holed—a rabbit. The ferret was sid on it and when Poor Bunny came out all guns went off simultaneously. When they came to look for their game after that broadside they couldn't find enough of him to make a respectable shoe string.

Elmer Doldridge motored out to Souly's lake last Thursday in quest of ducks, and when asked what he got he replied, "Well, I got back." He finally admitted, however, that he bagged three mud hens, and that when properly cooked they were as good as any bona fide duck. His receipt for cooking is as follows: Soak over night in salt water, and then parboil in two waters. This takes out the gammon taste. Next roll in flour and fry as you would spring chicken. We can vouch for this recipe as being highly successful.

Chris Aichele also fell for Souly's lake. He drove down there yesterday in his machine and in spite of the gammon class rain had good luck—two Mallards and four rice hens. When he started for home, however, his head lights gave out, and he didn't have any more matches for his side lights. Driving several miles he borrowed some from a farmer, but only one of his side lights would burn; the other being soaked in the rain. Finally the one remaining side light flickered out, and after a few more miles of slow and difficult progress, he concluded he would either have to have a light or stay where he was until he did get one. Rummaging through his tool chest he found a candle, stuck it in the headlight and came the rest of the way home on one candle power.

John Vermande, native of Holland and accomplished linguist with six languages in his repertoire, was put through some lively paces just before he took out his naturalization papers some thirty years ago. Some of his friends took him out on a con hunt—and not having coons in Holland, John knew less about the ins and outs of a con hunt than an Eskimo knows about a kangaroo hunter. However, he was willing to be instructed. And he was. He was taken out one hot night with a pack of hounds and in due time the con was treed. John was given a gunny sack with the mouth braced open by three sticks, and was told to climb the tree to where the con was roosted some forty feet in the air, saw off the limb in such a manner as to catch the con in his sack when it dropped. The intention of his companions, however, was that when the limb was sawed the con would swing around onto John's back.

But the con preferred the ground to John's back and jumped before he had proceeded very far with his sawing, and thus spoiled the whole game.

The late Jim Reed, formerly warden of Indiana state prison, and one time resident of this city, is to tell a story of two Irishmen who went out on their first hunt.

They spied a little pee-wee squatting on a fence rail, and Mike threw up his gun to shoot, when Tim shouted, "For the love of Hivin, Mike, don't shoot—the gun ain't loaded!"

"Begorra, I've got to," Mike retorted, "the bird won't wait."

Elias Ruppel used to tell of the time when, before the war, his father sold deer meat to the neighbors for five cents a pound, and recalls one time when he bagged a gunnysack full of squirrels at Rum Village in one morning's shooting.

YOUNG VIOLINIST GIVES ARTISTIC STUDIO RECITAL

The young protege of Prof. Ingersoll, John Szulcowski, who for the past few years has been studying violin under masters in the Fine Arts building in Chicago, was in South Bend Monday and gave an artistic studio recital for a few friends in the studio of Miss Caroline Walbridge at the South Bend Conservatory. He was assisted by his sister, Miss Frances Szulcowska, who is studying piano in the Fine Arts building, Chicago. The boy's talent was discovered by Mr. Ingersoll, under whom he studied for a number of years, during which time he became well known in the city for his extraordinary ability. He later went to Chicago, where he has been studying ever since. He is now going to Detroit to continue his work.

LOCAL BAPTISTS TO HAMMOND CONFERENCE

The annual missionary conference of the Women's Missionary societies of the Northern Indiana Baptist association will be held in Hammond Friday afternoon and evening and a number of delegates from the First Baptist church in South Bend will attend. Mrs. C. A. Decker, wife of the pastor of the church, is vice-president of the association and Miss Cora Wise, also of South Bend, is secretary. Mrs. S. G. Chard and several others will also attend. The afternoon session will be devoted to business and to an automobile ride through Hammond and to East Hammond, where the delegates will visit a Baptist mission among the Hungarians. In the evening the pastor of the Hammond Baptist church will give a stereopticon lecture.

EAGLES TO ERECT NEW HOME ON MICHIGAN ST.

The property on the west side of Michigan st. north of the alley between Lasalle av. and Madison st. will be the site for the new home to be erected by South Bend aerie, No. 435, Fraternal Order of Eagles. The deed for the lot was filed for record in the office of County Recorder Noah Lehman Monday. The consideration named in the deed is $2,000. C. C. Miller is chairman of the building committee of the lodge, through which the purchase was made from the Modern Home Co., of which S. D. Rider and D. C. Lantz are officers. The lot has a frontage of 66 feet and a depth of 115 feet. It is probable that active steps toward the erection of the building will not be taken until the first of the year.

HELD FOR FATHER'S DEATH

Madison, Ind., Youth is Accused of Murdering Parent.

MADISON, Ind., Oct. 21.—Harold Grimes was arrested here Monday on an indictment charging that he killed his father, William Grimes, whose body was found in a field Aug. 27. The elder Grimes had been slain with a shotgun.

A Neglected Cold Often Affects the Lungs

Many serious cases of Throat or Lung Trouble can be directly traced to a cough or cold which has been neglected. If you notice that a cough persists in clinging to you take warning. If you neglect trying to stop this supposed trivial trouble the throat and lungs later become affected. In many cases Eckman's Alternative has been the means of bringing permanent relief. Investigate this case.

Gentlemen: For five or six years I was troubled with cough and expectoration. I also had high fever. My case was declared Lung Trouble by my physician. I was given Cod Liver Oil, Castor oil and other medicines, all without benefit. At Christmas time, 1903, I was not expected to live. Calling Dr. H. H. McCarthy, he advised the use of Eckman's Alternative, which I took with excellent results. I have gained in weight, I go out in all weathers and have had no cough or cold whatever. I give these facts to encourage others to use Eckman's Alternative.

(Above abbreviated; more on request.) Eckman's Alternative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Strabismus, Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

TELLS STORY OF LIFE OF INDIAN GIRL SAINT

Rev. Mathew Walsh Speaks to Members of Children of Mary at St. Joseph's Hall.

Rev. Mathew Walsh, C. S. C., of Notre Dame university, addressed a large gathering of the members of the Children of Mary of St. Joseph's Catholic church Monday evening in the parish hall on "Katherine, the Lily of the Mohawks," which was the first of a series of talks to be given before the society during the winter by heads of the various departments of the university.

Dr. Walsh prefaced his talk with the story of Indian customs and a description of conditions among them before the missionaries visited them. He told of the coming of the first missionaries and of the suffering they endured and of the effect of their work among the various tribes. He described the conversion of St. Katherine, of the persecutions she endured from the other members of the tribe when she accepted Christianity and finally of her beautiful death.

The talk was greatly enjoyed by one of the largest gatherings which has attended the sodality meetings in some time and Dr. Walsh was extended a rising vote of thanks.
